INTRODUCTION

Motivated Seller — price reduced an additional $750,000. This offering combines a 483± deeded-acre ranch (with 320± acres gravity-fed irrigated) with a nearby 320-acre BLM grazing lease bisected by Crow Creek. Located 45 minutes from both Bozeman and Helena, properties of this size so close to major Montana cities are rare. Ideal for cattle and horses, the land provides ample seasonal grazing and multiple building sites with sweeping valley views for custom homes. Deeded acreage can support food plots—alfalfa, sainfoin, and other perennials—to attract wildlife; the ranch already draws elk, mule deer, antelope, and upland birds as the nearest irrigated ground to the Elkhorn Mountains. Nestled on the eastern Elkhorn foothills, the property offers panoramic eastern views and sunrises over the Big Belt Mountains, and is bordered by well-maintained county roads for easy access. Thousands of acres of BLM and Forest Service land lie within a mile, removing the need to trailer for recreation. The added BLM lease provides an extra 86 AUMs for grazing from June–October. Water is a key asset: solid water rights, gravity-fed supply from Crow Creek, efficient delivery, and low irrigation costs with reliable water through mid-July in normal years. Toston Pivots features three newly installed Reinke pivots and buried mainline, producing productive hay and irrigated pasture. Deeded acreage and leased ground are only 5 miles apart, making this a strong opportunity to add production to your ranching operation or to start your own place. No covenants or deed restrictions. INVESTING IN MONTANA RANCH LAND

Interest in Montana ranch land as an investment has been strong over the last several years. Throughout Montana, but particularly in Southwest Montana we have seen increased demand for ranches as a safe investment. Making the decision to pursue investing in ranch land can be incredibly rewarding (both personally and financially) but there are a lot of factors that go into investing and owning ranch land. "Ranch" is a general term that can describe a wide range of property from large income producing cattle ranches, smaller recreational properties, fly fishing properties, hunting ranches, or horse properties with just a few acres. All of these definitions of ranch property are in demand in Montana, and are appreciating in value over the long term. However, income producing ranch land is the most stable, and is in the highest demand by investors.

Before buying property in Montana it is important to understand Montana Water Rights. All water in Montana is owned by the State. A Montana Water Right allows you to legally use water in a prescribed manner, but not to own the water itself. Montana's water law is based in the Doctrine of Prior Appropriation - First in Time, First in Right. Water rights are ranked according to the date on which the water was first put to beneficial use. Priority dates dictate the volume and distribution of water from wells, rivers, and streams. Landowners must put the water to beneficial use without waste to retain their right to use Montana's water. Without diversion and beneficial use, there is no water right.

A conservation easement is a legal agreement between a landowner and a land trust that limits the uses of the land in order to protect its conservation values. The landowner retains title to the property. The creation of the conservation easement can qualify as a one-time donation that has tax benefits. The conservation easement runs with the title, meaning that if the property is purchased by a new owner, the conservation easement remains. Land ownership carries with it a bundle of rights—the right to occupy, lease, sell, develop, construct buildings, farm, restrict access or harvest timber, among others. A landowner can give up one or more of those rights for a purpose such as conservation while retaining ownership of the remainder of the rights. In ceding a right, the landowner “eases” it to another entity, such as a land trust. For example, a landowner may give up the right to build additional structures while retaining the right to grow crops.

Landowners looking to sell their property can use conservation easements to protect what future owners are able to do with the property. This typically reduces the marketable value of the property. If the conservation is setup properly, the landowners are able to take advantage of tax benefits associated with the creation and “donation” of the conservation easement. The potential tax benefits of a donated conservation easement are two-fold. First, income tax benefits may exist at the federal level. There may be benefits at the state level as well. However, state property taxes can not be reduced by a donation of a conservation easement in Montana. Second, the conservation easement works as an estate planning tool to reduce estate tax liability. To qualify for a tax deduction, the donation of a conservation easement must be considered a charitable gift by the IRS (Internal Revenue Service). It is strongly recommended that a qualified tax professional review the conservation easement donation to ensure it meets IRS requirements. A tax deductible, charitable donation can only be made to an IRS qualified tax-exempt organization. The donation of a conservation easement must be complete and irrevocable in perpetuity. In order to claim a tax deduction on the donation of a conservation easement the landowner must obtain a qualified appraisal by a state certified appraiser.
