INTRODUCTION

Escape to your own private slice of Southwest Montana with this rare 30-acre retreat tucked beneath the breathtaking Lima Peaks. Surrounded on three sides by U.S. Forest Service land, the property offers unparalleled access to thousands of acres of pristine wilderness—perfect for hunting, horseback riding, hiking, and year-round outdoor recreation. Rich in Montana character, the property features a rustic one-room homestead cabin, a classic log barn, and horse corrals, creating an ideal setting for a recreational getaway, hunting basecamp, or future homestead. Natural water amenities include the seasonal Middle Fork of Little Sheep Creek and two developed springs, adding both scenic beauty and practical value. Adventure begins right outside your door, with the nearby Middle Fork Trailhead providing access to some of Montana’s premier hiking, hunting, and riding country. For many years, the property served as the base for a successful outfitting business and packing school, highlighting its exceptional location and usability for backcountry recreation. The area is steeped in history and natural heritage, with ancient Shoshone-Bannock petroglyphs nearby and a homestead entry survey dating back to 1917. Seasonal public access restrictions from December 15 through May 15 help preserve critical elk habitat and contribute to the property’s remarkable privacy and seclusion. Conveniently located near the rural community of Lima, Montana, the property is just one hour from Dillon and approximately 90 minutes from the Idaho Falls airport. Whether you’re searching for a secluded mountain retreat, an equestrian property, a hunting haven, or the ideal place to build your Montana dream, this one-of-a-kind acreage offers a rare opportunity to own an authentic piece of the West. Call today for more information or to schedule a private showing. MLS# 411369

INVESTING IN MONTANA RANCH LAND

Interest in Montana ranch land as an investment has been strong over the last several years. Throughout Montana, but particularly in Southwest Montana we have seen increased demand for ranches as a safe investment. Making the decision to pursue investing in ranch land can be incredibly rewarding (both personally and financially) but there are a lot of factors that go into investing and owning ranch land. “Ranch” is a general term that can describe a wide range of property from large income producing cattle ranches, smaller recreational properties, fly fishing properties, hunting ranches, or horse properties with just a few acres. All of these definitions of ranch property are in demand in Montana, and are appreciating in value over the long term. However, income producing ranch land is the most stable, and is in the highest demand by investors.

Before buying property in Montana it is important to understand Montana Water Rights. All water in Montana is owned by the State. A Montana Water Right allows you to legally use water in a prescribed manner, but not to own the water itself. Montana’s water law is based in the Doctrine of Prior Appropriation – First in Time, First in Right. Water rights are ranked according to the date on which the water was first put to beneficial use. Priority dates dictate the volume and distribution of water from wells, rivers, and streams. Landowners must put the water to beneficial use without waste to retain their right to use Montana's water. Without diversion and beneficial use, there is no water right.

A conservation easement is a legal agreement between a landowner and a land trust that limits the uses of the land in order to protect its conservation values. The landowner retains title to the property. The creation of the conservation easement can qualify as a one-time donation that has tax benefits. The conservation easement runs with the title, meaning that if the property is purchased by a new owner, the conservation easement remains. Land ownership carries with it a bundle of rights—the right to occupy, lease, sell, develop, construct buildings, farm, restrict access or harvest timber, among others. A landowner can give up one or more of those rights for a purpose such as conservation while retaining ownership of the remainder of the rights. In ceding a right, the landowner “eases” it to another entity, such as a land trust. For example, a landowner may give up the right to build additional structures while retaining the right to grow crops.

Landowners looking to sell their property can use conservation easements to protect what future owners are able to do with the property. This typically reduces the marketable value of the property. If the conservation is setup properly, the landowners are able to take advantage of tax benefits associated with the creation and “donation” of the conservation easement. The potential tax benefits of a donated conservation easement are two-fold. First, income tax benefits may exist at the federal level. There may be benefits at the state level as well. However, state property taxes can not be reduced by a donation of a conservation easement in Montana. Second, the conservation easement works as an estate planning tool to reduce estate tax liability. To qualify for a tax deduction, the donation of a conservation easement must be considered a charitable gift by the IRS (Internal Revenue Service). It is strongly recommended that a qualified tax professional review the conservation easement donation to ensure it meets IRS requirements. A tax deductible, charitable donation can only be made to an IRS qualified tax-exempt organization. The donation of a conservation easement must be complete and irrevocable in perpetuity. In order to claim a tax deduction on the donation of a conservation easement the landowner must obtain a qualified appraisal by a state certified appraiser.
